Conferences were held with the school board welfare workers and State public health workers. Shoes and clothing were purchased for needy families. Hot lunches were served in three schools, and milk was served to the needy and underweight children. One teaspoonful of cod liver oil was given to the underweight and needy children twice a day.

Class room inspection was held at frequent intervals for symptoms of communicable diseases. Other activities consisted of health talks, weighing and measuring the children at regular intervals.

Visits to homes were made.

The audimeter was used in all schools and retests were made when necessary.
